More and more people around the world are getting tattoos. In the United States tattoos are extremely popular among people aged 25 to 40. A third of all Americans between 18 and 25 have a tattoo. In Britain, a fifth of all adults are tattooed. Tattooing has become a major industry as well. Today, there are more than 50,000 professional tattoo artists in the US alone.

Even celebrities and athletes, ranging from Angelina Jolie to David Beckham have tattoos on their bodies.

According to researchers many people tattoo themselves as a sign of individuality. They want to express themselves and show others who they are. Other forms of body art are also on the rise.

Today, tattoos are widely accepted in society. That has not always been the case. In former times tattoos were associated with criminals, lower class people or certain groups like sailors and motorcycle gangs. While tattooing was once a male characteristic, more and more women are now getting tattoos.

Tattooing goes way back in history. In many parts of the world, old civilisations used tattoos for decoration and as religious symbols. The ancient Romans tattooed their slaves. Native Americans tattooed themselves as a sign of bravery.

A. Natural History

The Natural History Museum is one of the most famous tourist attractions in New York City. It is a must-see, especially if you are travelling with children. There is no fixed admission price, just a recommended donation.

B. Guggenheim

Guggenheim Museum was designed by Frank Lloyd Wright. Expect to spend at least half a day going through the galleries and exploring the building. Try to head here early and avoid the weekends when the museum gets extremely crowded.

C. The Met

If you are planning on visiting the Met and another museum, you will have to prioritize; going through the entire Met is a full day (or two) affair.
