Read these texts about studying and working as an adult and match each text (1-5) to the most appropriate phrase (A-H). There are TWO phrases you do NOT need. Write your answers in the table provided. Text 0 is an example.

How to Balance School and Work as an Adult

TEXT 0

This is especially useful if you have a lot of meetings and your days are so different that you have difficulty remembering your timetable. Write all your fixed appointments - class times, work times, and familial obligations. This way you'll know exactly when your free time is.

TEXT 1

Find a place where you can study comfortably and without interruption. Make sure that you have a comfortable chair, a table, adequate lighting, and all the study materials you need for that study session.

TEXT 2

Talk about your timetable with your friends and family. Tell them what the life of a working student looks like and they might empathize - maybe, they'll try to make your life easier. At least, they'll know when to expect you and when to leave you alone.

TEXT 3

When you organize your timetable also include time for your family and family obligations. Create a separate column for things you need to do to keep your house in order, your family happy and well. Organize things like laundry and family meal times as well as other work related activities.

TEXT 4

Spend time with your friends. At the beginning of every week, plan something fun to do with them for the next weekend, like going out for dinner, or simply doing something together outside if the weather is nice. It will give you something to make you happy during the week.

TEXT 5

With so many responsibilities it's difficult to find time to relax. However, if you don't want to be stressed, it's important to programme some "me time" every week. Even if it's just an hour where you sit in a coffee shop and read a book for fun, make yourself a promise that you will make time to keep yourself happy and healthy.

Seasons in New Zealand

If you're looking for adventure in the open air, family fun, rest and relaxation, food and wine, cultural experiences or a bit of everything, New Zealand has something for you, no matter when you visit.

New Zealand's busy 'high season' is summer. Spring and autumn, called the 'shoulder seasons', are quieter. Winter in New Zealand can be busy or quiet depending on where you go – ski areas like Queenstown in the South Island are always full of life in winter, but coastal areas and big cities like Auckland and Wellington are less crowded. Travelling in the shoulder seasons can be a good idea as you'll often find more availability and better prices on accommodation and activities.

Summer is the most popular time to visit New Zealand. Over December, January and February, the number of visitors increases, as people arrive from foreign countries to travel while the weather is warm. Summer holidays mean more Kiwis* are travelling New Zealand too, making the most of the sunshine and Christmas break.

If you would prefer to enjoy sunny days, but with fewer crowds, the best time to go to New Zealand is in autumn. From March to May the weather is still reasonably warm – particularly in the north – but the crowds have become smaller. As autumn is also the shoulder season, you can enjoy better rates on accommodation and activities. Winter in New Zealand is the best time to visit if you're enthusiastic about snow sports. [...] If you want to ski or snowboard your way down the Southern Alps, the best month to visit New Zealand is either July or August.

Spring arrives in September and lasts until November. Although there is still a high chance of rain around this time of year, the weather starts to warm up – it's the perfect time of year to enjoy activities such as hiking. Spring is also when calves, lambs and yellow flowers pop up in New Zealand's green fields, so it's an incredibly picturesque time. Cool nights and warm days are common, which makes for pleasant travel weather.
