Animals

STORY 0

We have a daughter, Julia, and a parrot called Sammy. Julia travels a lot in her work and she is sometimes away for weeks or even months. She doesn't always know when she is coming back, but we always know because Sammy starts calling "Julia, Julia, Julia" a few hours before Julia walks through the door!

STORY 1

My friend Amanda was very ill. The doctor gave her some medicines, but they didn't help and she couldn't go to work for more than five years. One day, she decided to swim with the dolphins. The first time Amanda went there, a dolphin called Peter looked into her eyes and she started to cry. When she cried, Peter put his head on her shoulder and didn't move until she stopped crying. After that, Amanda could go back to work and goes to see Peter once a month.

STORY 2

My brother had to move to a new job three hundred kilometres away from home. He had a cat and a dog, but he only took the dog with him to the new house. About four weeks later, the dog suddenly disappeared. My brother was desperately looking for his dog but couldn't find him. One day, seven weeks later the dog came back. But he was not alone. The cat was with him. The dog had gone back to their old house because he could not live without the cat.

STORY 3

My neighbour, who is a bank worker in London, had to take his cat to the vet but didn't have time to go back home to pick it up. So he decided to take it to his office. While he was speaking on the phone at work, the cat walked across the keyboard of his computer and accidentally 100,000 pounds went from one client's account to another!

STORY 4

People say that fish are cold but some years ago, one of my friends was moving to another country, so we adopted her goldfish and put it in a bowl with our goldfish. They lived together for six months and then our friend came back and took her goldfish with her. I immediately noticed my goldfish was acting strangely. The next morning it was floating, dead. Later that day my friend called me and told me her goldfish had died, too. I believe they were in love.

STORY 5

While travelling in the north of England some years ago, my wife and I stopped at a quiet place for a picnic and played Beethoven on a CD player. After a few minutes we looked up and realised we had lots of cows around us listening to the music. When the classical music finished, we turned on the radio and the cows immediately turned round and left.

TAREA 2

My first Christmas in France

I was around seventeen years old when my family made a very important decision. One of those decisions that changes your life forever. My mother, an English teacher, had always wanted to live in France and she finally got the opportunity she was waiting for. She found a job as an English teacher at a secondary school near Paris. Moving to France was a huge change for us. My sister and I had to say goodbye to all our friends, and I was scared of not adapting well at my new school. But I was also excited to experience a new culture and learn the language. My parents had decided it would be a good idea to move in December right before the holidays. Flights to France were very expensive back then and there were no good train connections. So, we drove all the way from Oxford, England. The journey out to Paris was long and tiring but when we arrived then we knew the experience was going to be incredible. In Oxford we lived in a big flat in the city center. But in Paris houses were very expensive so we could not live in the center anymore. My parents found a small 2 bedroom house outside the city with a beautiful garden. It was located in a lovely village full of parks, cafes, and art galleries and there were Christmas decorations everywhere! People from other towns and villages come to visit its famous Christmas market every year. It was the perfect place for my parents to relax and eat bûche de Noël, a typical French Christmas cake. It was also great for us because we spent our weekends exploring the local area and ice skating. We didn't have any friends but we had each other. We walked through the streets of the village and drank delicious hot chocolate because it was freezing outside! That first Christmas my parents worked really hard to make our house a home, and the holidays felt so much more special. They had bought an enormous Christmas tree, with bright lights and colourful decorations. I remember walking into the living room on Christmas morning and being absolutely amazed by all the presents. During those Christmas holidays we often spent the evenings at home. My parents had fun trying to cook traditional French food while my sister and I had snowball fights in the garden. At home, in England, evenings were much more boring. We usually had dinner in the kitchen and then watched our favourite TV shows, but in France we really enjoyed trying new things. That Christmas was very special.
