Last month your English friend Bob found you on social media. You haven't seen each other since both of you were little. You were classmates and very good friends when he lived in Madrid for two years, but after he went back to England, you lost contact. He sent you this message:

Hi!

How are you? I'm glad I have finally found you. It's been a long time.

I see you are still living in Madrid. Well, I'm still living in England and I'm getting married in August! I would like to invite you and your partner (if you have one) to my wedding. Please, let me know how you have been and if you would like to attend my wedding. I would be glad to arrange your arrival and your stay at a nearby hotel.

Love,

Bob

Write an email to Bob and mention the following information:

- Explain how you have been and name a few things that happened in your life since you last saw Bob.
- Confirm if you will attend Bob's wedding and the arrangements you will need. If you will not attend his wedding, explain why.

MARK

OPTION 1

Your teacher at your Official School of Languages has asked you to write a text with the title What makes a good friend? for a competition organized by the writing club. The best written text will be published on the school website and its author will receive 100 euros to spend at popular bookshops in Madrid.

What makes a good friend?

Write your text considering the following points:

- What real friends do for us.
- Why your best friend became your best friend.
- Do you think people can have many real or good friends?

OPTION 2

You are going to participate in a class project, writing a story about an exciting day, which will be presented to the whole school at the end of the semester. The best class project will get a box that can be exchanged for an experience to try a new outdoor activity!

One of the best days of my life

Write your composition considering the following points in your writing:

- What things happened on this day?
- Where and who were you with?
