In class, you've recently been discussing Wordle, the game in which you to have guess a mystery five-letter word in a maximum of six attempts. Some of your classmates wondered how such a simple game had gone viral. You've read the following text about Wordle and decide to send a text to your class WhatsApp group to summarize what makes Wordle such a successful game.

This game has become a challenge between friends and family all over. They want to get the word in fewer guesses than the other people they are going against! Conveniently, once someone guesses the correct word, a screen pops up asking to share the win with others on social media, without revealing the actual answer.

Worldles have a single right answer and can only be played once a day. Because all users are trying to guess the same word, everyone is sharing a common experience and struggle. NHS psychologist Emma Hepburn thinks that "community element" is probably the most important aspect of Wordle at a time when many might feel isolated because of COVID.

Wordle forces people to think about words that may have been forgotten, or have never heard of before. All you need to play Wordle is an internet connection. It's free and doesn't require an app, as you play on your browser.

It is clear that Wordle is a highly favored game right now. People enjoy something to look forward to everyday, knowing that a new word awaits them. It is a way to have a friendly competition, and expand your vocabulary every day.

So, yes, if you aren't Wordle-ing, you really are missing out.

Write your text in 80-100 words.

Note: Mediation exercises require you to write a short text that goes to the point. Try not to reproduce exact sentences from the input text. Do not go over the word limit.
