TAREA 2 DIÁLOGO: RETIREMENT PENSIONS

You, like many other middle-aged citizens these days, are worried that when you retire in the long term future there might not be a substantial retirement pension that enables you to lead quiet and tranquil years in the sunset of your life. The situation as depicted in the news is certainly disturbing. Your spouse, a most sensible person who you are still in love with even after many years of marriage and who has never left the house to work outside, will not receive any contributory pension from the government, which adds to your concern.

Have a conversation with your spouse explaining why you are so deeply concerned about the situation and asking for advice on what to do.

TAREA 2 DIÁLOGO: RETIREMENT PENSIONS

Your spouse, who you have always loved so much, is deeply concerned about the situation for pensioners in the long term future. And rightly so, you think, as judged by the situation portrayed in the news lately and, besides, knowing that you will not get any pension from the government. You know your spouse to be partially right, but you don't want her/him to worry too much over this issue. Hear what he/she has to say and give advice on a few guidelines to save money, like a pension scheme, that will allow you both to live the last years of your life well provided with the necessities of life.
