Has mass media improved communication?

© <https://mx.pinterest.com/pin/1151795673431684744/>

We can't deny the impact of social media on communication, whether verbal or non-verbal, visual or written. Social media allows us to keep in touch with our loved ones worldwide, helps share information, and creates communities of people with similar goals, while also forging new opportunities in the world of work, among other benefits.

Yet some people argue that social media can lead to false expectations and miscommunication and negatively impact our social skills, especially when it comes to younger users.

There is no doubt that social media is gradually transforming our communication habits, and in the process, our relationships. But do the obvious benefits of social media outweigh the often-hidden negative side effects? What is your opinion? Please, leave a comment below.

With the rise of aesthetic clinics, non-surgical cosmetic enhancement procedures - such as anti-wrinkle injections that use Botox, chemical peels that remove the top layers of skin, and dermal fillers to restore lost volume - are growing in popularity. Likewise, different types of plastic surgery have become normalised, even for very young people. What are your thoughts on this matter?

Write an opinion essay in which you examine the reasons for this trend, and discuss the potential consequences it can have on people's wellbeing.
