You have received the following email from the Head of the language school:

Dear student,

The school is aware that many students are interested in spending time in an English-speaking country during the summer holidays in order to further practice their English by doing a course or other activities.

It has been suggested that the school could help by establishing links with a school abroad and thereby facilitate this opportunity. We are considering the idea but we'd love to hear your suggestions first regarding the kind of course and where to go, ideal accommodation and any other suggestions of activities that could help you improve your skills in English.

Many thanks,

The Head

Nowadays, more and more apps help people to learn English or translate texts. Some scientists point out that in a few years not only will there be apps that could operate as interpreters between two or more speakers but also robots as English-speaking teachers in many classrooms all over the globe.

A magazine called "The Future of English" has asked its readers to send in their opinion on the subject of robotic English teachers and their predictions about the future of English and other foreign language teaching.

Write a letter to the editor on the topic discussing the viability of the global robotic development in teaching foreign languages, the possible benefits and drawbacks of English-speaking robots and how necessary it might be to learn foreign languages in the future.

OPTION B

Microsoft Japan tried a four-day workweek and says "productivity rose by 40% and electricity costs fell by 23%." Similar experiments in Finland and New Zealand have demonstrated that the four-day workweek has made workers happier and companies more profitable. As a result, the drumbeat for a four-day workweek is getting louder.

Write an opinion essay on the subject of the four-day workweek. Mention some challenges employers, employees and clients would have to face if this idea came true in Spain, the advantages and drawbacks it could have for society in general and who you think could benefit the most.
